Today, we said goodbye to you! You will forever be missed by US. I will miss your phone calls, our visits and our trips together. You were a big sister which I adored. I thank you for loving my brother and giving me three adorable, sweet nephews which I love dearly. They all are special to me in different ways but I love each one. Their personalities are different but similar and that they got from you and Pat. You will forever be missed. Until we see each other again, it's not goodbye, it's see you later! Love, Cindy

She taught me hard days need things, like a bag of chocolate and that it's ok to sit in the parking lot and eat the entire bag while you cry then you suck it up and get shit done. She taught me hard days need awesome shoes. She taught me that you never go on vacation without plenty of swimsuits, one for everyday and then an extra one. She taught me confidence and to not let anyone see your weaknesses. Hold your head up high and make everyone in the room look at you. She taught me to smile your biggest smile and hug the enemy, show them they aren't affecting you. She taught me to teach our girls how to smile and to put that crown on your head like princess Diana and wave. She was the original mean girl and I absolutely loved that about her. She wanted to learn how to quilt like Aunt Ruby but she loved buying them just as much. She would hide a body for her boys and never mention another word about it, she was the most loyal, loving mother and a perfect example of how a mother should love their children. I am so incredibly grateful for all the time we spent together wall papering every room, then pulling it all down years later to paint. She always had an idea or project for me. I loved that no matter how it turned out she loved it. So many wonderful memories spent shopping and decorating. I am so very grateful for the 27 years she was my mom. I loved the way no matter what my kids could always depend on Mawmaw to be at every concert, dance comp, baseball or football game and she always had an endless stack of credit cards and never even considered telling them no, even if Pawpaw didn't talk to her for weeks. To the world you may be one person, but to one person you may be the world. Please keep Pat and the boys and our babies in your thoughts and prayers today as we say our goodbyes to Janet so unexpectedly and way too soon. Kristy McClelland

I've had the pleasure of styling Janet's hair for many years. She and I would sit and visit the entire time. She shared stories about her family. They were the love of her life. Such a happy person with a smile that lit up the room. I will miss her. I will miss hearing how the family is growing and who is doing what. I pray the happy memories you hold dear.... of times spent together..... will carry you through the days, months, and years ahead...until we all meet up with her again. Rest in Peace my dear friend.

You never saw Janet without a big smile on her face. Quick to laugh. Loved her family and her boys with a passion. She always enjoyed spoiling them and making them smile. She was always so sweet and kind. Her passing has left a big hole in her family. Praying for comfort and God's grace for the family. Rhonda Langdon ❤️🙏
